

Hello,

If you are struggling with addiction today, I want you to know something important: you are not alone, and you are not beyond hope. Addiction does not make you weak. It does not make you worthless. It does not define who you are. It is a battle – and battles can be won.

God sees every tear you've cried, every moment you've felt ashamed, every time you've tried to quit, and every time you've fallen again. He has not turned His back on you. He has not given up on you. His love for you has not changed.

The Bible says that God is "near to the brokenhearted" and that His strength is made perfect in our weakness. That means you don't have to fight this battle alone. God is ready to walk with you, strengthen you, and lift you up one step at a time.

Addiction tells you that you'll never be free.
God tells you that whom the Son sets free is free indeed.

Addiction tells you that you're too far gone.
God tells you that His mercy is new every morning.

Addiction tells you that you're alone.
God tells you that He will never leave you nor forsake you.

If you're tired, hurting, or afraid, you can come to Jesus just as you are. He already knows your struggle, and He loves you deeply. He offers forgiveness, healing, and a brand-new start.

Here is a simple prayer you can pray:

Lord, I need Your help. I cannot overcome this addiction on my own.
Please give me strength, healing, and freedom.
Forgive me for every wrong choice and every moment of weakness.
Fill my heart with Your peace and Your power.
Walk with me every day and help me become the person You created me to be.
Thank You for loving me and never giving up on me.
Amen.

You are valuable. You are loved. You are not beyond God's reach.
There is hope for you – real hope – and you don't have to walk this road alone.

With love and understanding,
